He argues that the trial court misunderstood the impact of his acceptance of responsibility and failed to sentence him in accordance with the state plea agreement, but those arguments do not demonstrate that the trial court failed to understand the sentences for the state and federal offenses or the implications of rejecting the state plea offer. Finally, all three of Bearden's arguments related to the disposition of the state charges at sentencing—the sixteen-month disparity in the sentences and the sentence imposed without the benefit of the state plea offer—fail for the same
